United States District Judge, defendant Teofil Brank will move as follows:

MOTION

Defendant Teofil Brank, by and through his counsel of record, Seema Ahmad and Ashfaq G. Chowdhury, Deputy Federal Public Defenders, hereby moves this Honorable Court for an order suppressing evidence of obtained from the warrantless

1 search of the closed container belonging to Mr. Brank in the car of Etienne Yim on 2 March 4, 2015. Mr. Yim purported to consent to the search of his car, but (1) his 3 consent was not voluntary, and (2) he did not have actual or apparent authority to 4 authorize a search of Mr. Brank's closed container. As such, the warrantless search of 6 Amendment to the United States Constitution. Mr. Brank also moves to suppress any 7 and all evidence obtained as a result of the illegal search of the closed container.

8 This motion is based on the attached Memorandum of Points and Authorities,

I. INTRODUCTION

FBI Agents searched a backpack belonging to Mr. Brank that was located in a car owned by a third party, Etienne Yim, based on purported voluntary consent to search the car given by Mr. Yim. Agents went even further, and unzipped a brown leather case that was in the backpack. Because Ninth Circuit law is clear that, in this situation, a third party who has an ownership interest in a vehicle does not have actual or apparent authority to authorize a search of closed containers belonging to others located in the vehicle, see United States v. Welch, 4 F.3d 761, 764 (9th Cir. 1993) (third party who consented to search of car did not have actual or apparent authority to consent to search of purse, located in car)¹, the search of Mr. Brank's backpack was illegal, and all the fruits of that search must be suppressed.

II. BACKGROUND

On March 4, 2015, FBI agents arrested defendant Brank in the parking lot of a mini-mall containing a Starbucks and a Jersey Mike's. Bates 125-29, attached as Exhibit A to Declaration of Seema Ahmad. Mr. Brank was arrested purportedly based on probable cause that he had committed "extortion." Id. at 125.

Following Mr. Brank's arrest, the agents detained an individual named Etienne Yim:

Immediately following Brank's arrest, Special Agent (SA) Jonathan H. Bauman noticed an unknown male seated in the driver's seat of a dark colored Ford Focus parked in a row of spaces within close proximity of where Brank's arrest occurred. SA Bauman approached the unknown male in the vehicle and asked his purpose for being in the area. The unknown male initially stated something to the effect [sic], I am just waiting in the area.

¹ Partially reversed on other grounds in United States v. Kim, 105 F.3d 1579 (9th Cir. 1997). See also United States v. Arreguin, 735 F.3d 1168, 1178 (9th Cir. 2013) (applying Welch in reversing denial of motion to suppress); United States v. Davis, 332 F.3d 1163, 1168-69 (9th Cir. 2003) (same).

1 Upon further questioning, the unknown male added something to the effect
2 of, I am here to pick up my friend. In order to clarify the unknown male's
3 purpose for remaining in the area during Brank's arrest, and for officer
4 safety reasons, SA Bauman requested the unknown male exit his vehicle for 5 additional questioning. The unknown male agreed to do so. After existing [sic]
6 his vehicle, SA Bauman asked the unknown male for the location of the 7 friend for whom he was waiting. The unknown male pointed toward the 8 entrance of the Starbucks coffee shop. SA Bauman then asked the unknown
9 male for the name of his friend. The unknown male stated "Teo." SA Bauman 10 immediately detained the unknown male under suspicion he was associated 11 with Teofil Brank. The unknown male subsequently confirmed he was waiting 12 for Brank and identified himself as Etienne. His identity was confirmed 13 when Agents located a California Driver License on his person containing 14 his photograph, the name of Etienne Kaala Yim.

15 Ahmad Decl., Ex. A, at 126.

16 The agents then purportedly proceeded to obtain Mr. Yim's consent to search the 17 car:

18 Following Yim's detention, Agents conducted a protective sweep of the 19 passenger compartment of Yim's Ford Focus. After the protective sweep was 20 completed, Supervisory Special Agent (SSA) Joseph P. Brine asked Yim for 21 permission to search his vehicle. Yim consented to the search and also 22 advised he would assist Agents in locating items in the vehicle belonging
23 to Brank. SSA Brine escorted Yim to the vehicle. Yim identified a black 24 High Sierra brand backpack and a Samsung brand cellular telephone, both 25 laying [sic] in plain sight in the center console of the front passenger 26 compartment of the vehicle, as belonging to Brank. SSA Brine observed a 27 brown leather case sticking out of the top of the black High Sierra brand
28 backpack. The case looked to SSA Brine to be a case commonly used to store

1 firearms. SSA Brine undid the zipper of the brown leather case and 2 observed a firearm. Subsequently, the Black High Sierra brand backpack,
3 all of its contents, and the Samsung brand cellular telephone were seized
4 as evidence.

5 Ahmad Decl., Ex. A, at 126-27.

6 Mr. Brank claims ownership of the black backpack. See Declaration of Teofil
7 Brank.²

9 III. DISCUSSION

10 The search of Mr. Brank's backpack and the search of the brown leather case 11 was illegal for the following reasons:

12 A. Mr. Yim's consent was not knowing and voluntary;

13 B. Mr. Yim did not have actual authority to consent to the search of Mr.
14 Brank's backpack, and 15 C. Mr. Yim did not have apparent authority to consent to the search of Mr.

16 Brank's backpack.

17 Accordingly, the evidence obtained as a result of the search of the backpack must be 18 suppressed. See Welch, 4 F.3d at 764.

19 A. Mr. Yim's Consent Was Not Knowing and Voluntary

20 The burden is on the government to prove that Mr. Yim's consent to the search 21 of the car was knowing and voluntary. Welch, 4 F.3d at 763 (citing Schneckloth v.
22 Bustamonte, 412 U.S. 218, 227 (1973)). The factors to be weighed are (1) whether the 23 person was in custody; (2) whether the officers had their guns drawn; (3) whether 24

26 ² The Declaration of Teofil Brank is provided pursuant to Simmons v. United 27 States, 390 U.S. 377, 390-94 (1968), and Mr. Brank does not waive his Fifth 28 Amendment privilege. All facts other than those set forth in Mr. Brank's declaration are based on facts alleged in the FBI report provided to the defense. The defense does not concede the accuracy of the facts alleged in the report.

1 Miranda warnings had been given; (4) whether the person was told that he had a right
 2 not to consent; (5) whether he was told a search warrant could be obtained. Id. (citing 3 United States v. Carbajal, 956 F.2d 924, 930 n. 3 (9th Cir. 1992)).

4 Here the FBI's own report appears to establish that

- 5 1. Mr. Yim was in custody as he was "immediately detained" by armed FBI
- 6 agents after he mentioned that he was waiting for his friend "Teo";
- 7 2. That no Miranda warnings were given;
- 8 3. That Mr. Yim was not told he had a right not to consent.

9 Ahmad Decl., Ex. A.

10 It is also likely that guns were drawn, given that the FBI report states that Mr.
 11 Yim was "immediately detained." It thus appears that, on balance, the government will 12 be unable to carry its burden to establish that Mr. Yim's consent to the search of the car 13 was knowing and voluntary. See Welch, 4 F. 3d at 763.

14
 15 B. Mr. Yim Lacked Authority to Consent to the Search of Mr. Brank's
 16 Backpack

17 The government has the burden of establishing the effectiveness of a third party's 18 consent. Welch, 4 F.3d 764 (citing Illinois v. Rodriguez, 497 U.S. 177, 179 (1990)).

19 The government can do so in three ways:

20 First, the government can come forward with persuasive evidence of both shared 21 use and joint access to or control over a searched area, which would demonstrate 22 actual authority to consent. . . . Second, it can show that the owner of the 23 property to be searched has expressly authorized a third party to give consent to 24 the search. Finally, it may establish consent by means of the "apparent authority 25 doctrine."

26 Welch, 4 F. 3d at 764 (citations omitted). Each of these will be discussed in turn.

1 1. Mr. Yim Had No Actual Authority to Consent to a Search of Mr.
 2 Brank’s Backpack under a Theory of Joint Access and Mutual
 3 Use

4 Mr. Yim plainly could give lawful consent to a search of his car. However, Mr.
 5 Brank’s backpack, and the contents therein, “is another matter entirely.” Welch, 4 F.3d
 6 at 764. That Mr. Brank “had a limited expectation of privacy in the car by virtue of 7 [his] sharing arrangement with [Mr. Yim] does not mean that [he] had similarly limited 8 privacy expectations in items within the car which are independently the subject of 9 such expectations.” Id. “The shared control of ‘host’ property does not serve to forfeit
 10 the expectation of privacy in containers within that property.” Id. (citing United States 11 v. Karo, 468 U.S. 705, 725-27 (1984) (O’Connor, J., concurring)).

12 Here, “there is no question that [Mr. Brank] had a reasonable expectation of 13 privacy in the contents of [his backpack].” Welch, 4 F.3d at 764. Indeed, “a [backpack]
 14 is a type of container in which a person possesses the highest expectation of privacy.”
 15 Id. (citing United States v. Salinas-Cano, 959 F.2d 861, 864 (10th Cir. 1992)).
 16 “Therefore, the government must show shared control with respect to the [backpack] as 17 well as with respect to the vehicle if it is to prevail on a mutual use and joint control
 18 theory.” Id. In this case, it cannot do so: “there is simply nothing in the record
 19 demonstrating that [Mr. Yim] had use of, let alone joint access to or shared control 20 over, [Mr. Brank’s backpack].” Id. (citing Rawlings v. Kentucky, 448 U.S. 98, 105
 21 (1980) (suspect has no reasonable expectation of privacy in companion’s purse)). As a 22 result, Mr. Yim plainly did not have actual authority under a theory of joint access to 23 and mutual use of the backpack.

24 2. Mr. Yim Had No Actual Authority based on Express
 25 Authorization to Consent to a Search of the Backpack

26 Here, as in Welch, “[l]ittle need be said with regard to the second means by 27 which effective third party consent could be established – express authorization.”
 28 Welch, 4 F.3d 764. That is because “[t]here is simply nothing in the record [that]

1 indicates that [Mr. Brank] expressly authorized [Mr. Yim] to give consent to a search of 2 [his backpack].” Id.

3 3. Mr. Yim Did Not Have Apparent Authority to Consent to a Search
4 of the Backpack

5 “Under the apparent authority doctrine, a search is valid if the government 6 proves that the officers who conducted it reasonably believed that the person from 7 whom they obtained consent had the actual authority to grant that consent.” Welch, 4 8 F.3d at 764. “However, the doctrine is applicable only if the facts believed by the 9 officer to be true would justify the search as a matter of law.” Id. “A mistaken belief 10 as to the law, no matter how reasonable, is not sufficient.” Id.

11 When the agents decided to search Mr.Brank’s backpack, they knew that 1) 12 Brank was Yim’s friend, 2) Brank had traveled with Mr. Yim to the parking lot, 3) the 13 backpack belonged to Brank. See Ahmad Decl., Ex. A. “There is nothing about these 14 facts that would have led a reasonable officer to believe that [Mr. Brank] had expressly 15 given [Mr. Yim] authority to consent to the search of the [backpack].” Welch, 4 F.3d at 16 765. “Nor would any of these facts have caused a reasonable officer to believe that 17 [Mr. Yim] shared use of and had joint access to or control over [Mr. Brank’s backpack]
18 and that the search was justified for that reason. Moreover, any such belief would have 19 necessarily rested on the erroneous assumption that the mere presence of the 20 [backpack] in the [car] gave [Mr. Yim] control over it or access to its contents, or, to 21 put it differently, that [Mr. Brank’s] leaving the [backpack] in the car gave [Mr. Yim] 22 the right to open it without [him].” Id. “Such an assumption would have been 23 erroneous and would have reflected a mistaken belief as to the law. . . . Therefore, the 24 facts available to the officers at the time of the search do not support application of the 25 apparent authority doctrine.” Id.

26 Just as in Welch, there is nothing “about the circumstances of [Mr. Yim’s] 27 exchange with the [agents] that would have caused them reasonably to believe that he 28 had actual or express authority to consent to a search of [Mr. Brank’s] [backpack].” 4

1 F.3d at 765. As in Welch, Mr. Yim and Mr. Brank were separately detained and unable 2 to communicate at the time Mr. Yim purportedly consented to the search, and “[t]here
3 is no evidence that [Mr. Brank] was aware of [Mr. Yim’s] actions or had any 4 knowledge that the [agents] desired to conduct a search of any kind.” Id. Therefore,
5 “the [agents] were required, at a minimum, to inquire further before assuming [Mr.
6 Yim’s] consent was sufficient to authorize them to open the [backpack] they discovered
7 during their search of the automobile.” Id.

8 “In sum, even if it is assumed that the [agents] subjectively believed that [Mr.
9 Yim] had the authority to consent to a search of [Mr. Brank’s backpack], . . . the search
10 of the [backpack] cannot be upheld on the basis of the apparent authority doctrine.”
11 Welch, 4 F.3d at 764. “Reasonable belief” will not save the search because the agents’
12 errors were errors of law and not of fact. Id. And because the government will be 13 unable to carry its burden of demonstrating that the purported consent to search Mr.
14 Brank’s backpack was valid, the search must be deemed unlawful and the results of that 15 search suppressed. Id.

16 As a separate matter, agents lacked probable cause to search the brown leather
17 case. The FBI report makes clear that agents “undid the zipper of the brown leather 18 case.” There was no legal basis for this intrusion into the brown case. Therefore, the 19 search was illegal and its fruits must be suppressed.

IV. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the motion should be granted and the search and seizure of the backpack and its contents – and all evidence obtained as a result of that search -- should be suppressed.
